Netchemia is reshaping the way schools work by transforming existing, paper-based processes into web-based applications that are powerful, secure, and easy to use.

Solution Overview | 1

Client :

Topeka School District
netIEP | Special Education Management

Challenge

The Topeka School district has more than 300 teachers and administrators involved in the Special Education process. After many years of using a paper based process, they were looking for a way to reduce the amount of paperwork as well as reducing their litigation risk by lowering mistakes that are common as part of the complex IEP process.

Solution

Netchemia implemented netIEP a web based Special Education Management system tailored to the process of the Topeka School District. With netIEP, the once time-consuming, paper-based procedure of recording student information is converted into a series of navigable online forms where educators enter the required information effortlessly, all in one place. Educators and Administrators then have real-time access to up-to-date student information across the Internet.

Benefits

Reduction in time to create an IEP

More accurate and timely reporting of student data to the state.

Increased collaboration between team members that are part of the IEP process.

More professional document easy to read by parents.

Improved visibility to administrators through reports across several layers of information.

Client:

Park Hill School District
trackPath | Professional Development

Challenge

The Park Hill School district has more than 600 staff that follow professional development plans and must take graduate courses, in-service training or other professional development courses in order to maintain their certification and to move up on the salary scale. The paper based process to request permission to take a course, get approval and track number of points and credits can be a complex, time consuming process. This vital process involves several layers of administrative personnel and affects personnel training, contract decisions, and personnel budgets. The district needed a way to reduce paperwork, increase access to information, and reduce unnecessary work for professional development staff and HR administrative personnel.

Solution

Based on its oneSCHOOL platform, Netchemia implemented a Professional Development Tracking System customized for the district. To take advantage of current infrastructure, the new system will integrate with other legacy applications that the district uses. With Netchemia's solution, teachers will be able to access in-service and online training offerings in real time and instantly view what training they have been approved for as well as number of points and salary standing.

Benefits

Reduction in training request and approval process time.

Tracking of requests, approvals and denials by administrators.

Client:

Raytown School District
oneSCHOOL | Alumni Manager

Challenge

As part of Raytown's Centennial Celebration the School District was trying to get information about their former students in order to better communicate with them and increase the sense of community within the district.

Solution

Netchemia's oneSCHOOL platform was a great engine to deliver Raytown "The Connection" allows alumni and former students to reconnect with classmates, register for district and class information, and update their current contact information via an easy to use web interface. Raytown personnel also have easy access to alumni data to contact them with upcoming events or messages of interest.

Benefits

Increased alumni and community involvement

Free benefit offered by School District to former students

Decreases district's staff time in updating Alumni databases manually and maintaining current information

Easy permission based e-mail communication between registered Alumni
